

Grootbos Nature Reserve

Grootbos Nature Reserve serves as a prominent model of sustainable tourism. Encompassing vast expanses of indigenous fynbos and ancient milkwood forests, this eco-reserve has established itself as a pioneer in forward-thinking luxury tourism by prioritizing community support and harmonious coexistence with nature. Within this establishment, single-use plastics have been entirely phased out, while significant focus is placed on harnessing rainwater. Additionally, the staff relies on eco-friendly cleaning products instead of harsh detergents, and solar panels are harnessed to generate power, further reinforcing its commitment to environmental sustainability.
